Margaret Turton

Capturing the essence of Sussex landscapes

INSPIRED by the dramatic southern edge of England with its white cliffs, rolling downland and historic landmarks, Margaret works in watercolours and acrylics, painting spectacular views and quiet corners of her local area.

DRIVEN by the need to conserve rural and historic landscapes, she aims to inspire future generations to appreciate this very special environment.

A GROWING reputation as an accomplished artist brings regular invitations to participate in local exhibitions and has also led to an appearance on BBC COUNTRYFILE, in October 2012. The episode featured the campaign to raise money to repaint the iconic Beachy Head lighthouse which was in danger of neglect. Margaret's paintings visualised the before and after views of the lighthouse.
